Ag-Secretary Opposes OPA Rollback on Meat Prices

NEW CEILINGS TO BE HIGHER THAN BEFORE

Price Agency Yanks Ceilings Off Polishes, Leathers, Most Baby Foods.

WASHINGTON — (AP) — OPA yanked ceilings off many polishes and a whole zoo-full of leathers today as its deadline approached for posting new price tags on meats.

The prospects are that steaks, chops, roasts, hamburgers and other meats will be somewhat higher than they were when OPA lapsed June 30.

Aides of Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson said he wants á $2 a hundred boost in cattle and hog prices despite OPA Chief Paul Porter's preference for a complete rollback. And congress gave Anderson final say over all agricultural ceilings.

The meat recontrol becomes effective tomorrow midnight on live animals. Once these ceilings are fixed, OPA said it will be easy to determine packer, wholesaler and dealer prices which begin to apply in that order next week.

* * *

Sugar Still Scarce.

Housewives got a mixture of good and bad news from OPA late yesterday. They were told that the present limit of five pounds of sugar for each ration stamp must continue during the last four months of this year and at least the beginning of next.

Spare stamp No. 51 will become valid Sept. 1, but OPA granted a 30-day extension on stamp No. 49 which was to have expired Aug. 31 because many buyers have been unable to find sugar.

Another staple, canned tomatoes, will soon cost an additional two cents for the standard No. 2 can. OPA said Anderson had allowed an immediate increase of 14 cents on a case of 12 cans to processors and that this would cause the boost on top of the recent two cent increase allowed to offset the end of subsidies.

Most baby and junior foods were freed from price control meanwhile, under an automatic provision of the new law requiring such action when OPA finds supplies adequate. The agency said it expected prices to remain near present ceilings.

* * *

Demands Price Lids.

In New York Porter told a rally of OPA employes that he would "insist" that price lids be restored to milk, butter and the long list of dairy products.

Porter said he believes the prices "will get out of hand."

Today's decontrols apply to polishes for shoes, floors, furniture and automobile as well as industrial wax finishes and dressings if they contain three per cent or more of imported waxes.

OPA said ceilings had been removed previously from these imports and while prices rose sharply, it had decided against attempting recontrol because the waxes are regarded as minor in their economic impact.

Similar reasons were cited for decontrol of a long list of leathers ranging from antelope to zebra skins. OPA said these leathers are used largely in novelty or luxury items, such as gloves, purses and baggage.

READY TO GO

National Air Races to Open Friday in Cleveland.

CLEVELAND—(INS)—The main body of army, navy and marine planes roared into Cleveland today for the national air races starting Friday and continuing through Labor Day.

Eight civilian pilots passed take-off pullup and turn qualifying tests yesterday for the Thompson and Sohio pylon events. Qualifying speed trials were held up again by delay in proper marking of three of the four pylons on the 30-mile closed course.

The "very low altitude barrage balloons" were sent from the Fort Bragg, S. C., army air base to serve as markers to enable air race pilots to locate the pylons in their seven-mile-a-minute flying.

By GEORGE KNOX
(News-Journal State Editor)

LOUDONVILLE—A festive air was being assumed by this community today as merchants and citizens made final preparations for tomorrow's celebration of the 70th birthday of Charles F. Kettering, Ashland county's famous inventor.

Downtown merchants put the finishing touches on window displays in keeping with the turn-of-the-century. Workmen completed the decoration of Central park where a stand has been erected to seat the visiting notables, close friends, relatives, and business associates who will throng here tomorrow to pay homage to Kettering.

The Day's Program

12 noon—Private dinner party at Kettering home.
1:45 p. m.—American Legion band concert, Central park.
2:30—Mayor Edward L. Smith welcomes visitors.
2:55—H. H. Young introduces notables.
3:00—Pageant.
4:30—Broadcast of talk by Kettering, to be followed by presentation of community gift and cutting of seven foot birthday cake.

Festivities will open with a private dinner party at the Kettering homestead, two miles outside of Loudonville. At 1:30 p. m., the American Legion band will present a pre-program concert in Central park and at 2:30 the Mayor will open the afternoon activities with an address of welcome to the visitors.

Among the events planned for the afternoon program are a pageant depicting the 1880 and 1890 eras, a barber shop quartet, a style show, a coon dog chase in the middle of town, square dancing to old time fiddlers, and a parade of ancient

Blaze Threatens Waterfront Area

NEW ORLEANS—(U.P.)—A general alarm fire which caused thousands of dollars of damage and threatened some $5,000,000 of coffee and scarce electrical equipment here last night was investigated today by fire and police officials.

The spectacular riverfront blaze was believed to have started in the Westinghouse Electrical and Refrigeration Supply company building shortly before midnight.

TRUCK OVERTURNS

COVINA, Calif. —(U.P.)—Seventeen children were recovering today from injuries received when a truck carrying them on an outing overturned on a narrow mountain road. Ophelia Orono, 18, was killed when she was pinned beneath the wheels of the truck.

SUMMER MAKES A SHORT STOP

Return of Warm Weather to End Tomorrow With Showers on Way.

After a short return of summer weather, Mansfield was scheduled for showers tonight followed by cooler weather tomorrow and through Friday.

Scattered showers are forecast for all of Ohio, beginning tonight, the weatherman said. "Tomorrow it will be cloudy and cooler with more showers," he said.

At noon today the thermometer had already slipped to 72 after a high yesterday of 78. Moderate temperatures were to remain in effect today after the mercury finally managed to climb into the low 80's in some parts of the state for the first time in more than a week.

LIGHTS CHANGE

City Traffic Signals Taken Off Staggered System.

Mansfield's traffic lights have been re-timed and re-set in an effort to eliminate unnecessary stopping and starting by autos in the down-town section.

Instead of being "staggered" red, green, red, green, from block to block, you'll find them all one "color" at a particular moment.

Mayor Roy W. Vaughn said it is hoped the new system will help break up traffic bottle-necks and eliminate "creeping" driving.

Report Defective Shells Killed 38

WASHINGTON —(U.P.)— An official army report today listed 38 American soldiers killed and 127 wounded by premature explosions of defective 4.2 inch mortar shells during World War II.

The report, released by the senate war investigating committee, said the 165 casualties resulted from 63 cases of the premature explosions.

GET 25-YEAR TERMS

DAYTON—(AP)—Common Pleas Judge Robert U. Martin has ordered George (Bugs) Moran and Virgil Summers of Henderson, Ky., and Al Fouts of Dayton removed to Ohio Penitentiary within five days to serve 10 to 25 years. The judge yesterday overruled motions for a new trial following conviction of the trio Monday for the $10,000 armed robbery of a tavern employe here last June 28.

Currier Smiles, He's Found Home at Last

First of N-J's Homeless Vets Gets Residence to Which He Can Bring His Wife.

By ALVIN PREYER

Clifford Currier has a big smile today. He has a place to live. Soon his wife, who has been living alone in Elyria, will be joining him. Their new home is on Park avenue west, with a benefactress who insists she remain anonymous.

Currier got his home as the result of an appeal published in the News-Journal. His was the first typical homeless veteran case presented in the current series.

Mrs. T. W. Blackburn, jr., of the Veterans Information center, reports at least a dozen calls, from Mansfield, Shelby and Lucas, have been received as a result of the News-Journal stories.

Mrs. Blackburn said one placement has been made, and there are prospects that other will be made soon.

Though the response to the requests presented in the News-Journal has been prompt and generous, the need for homes and apartments for veterans remains most urgent, Mrs. Blackburn said.

* * *

Here's Today's Case.

She cited this as another case: It's a long way to North Dakota where John B. Kirschenheiter's wife and two children anxiously await word that he has found a home and that they are to join him here.

After three and one half years of service as an instructor in the field artillery, Kirschenheiter was able to spend only a brief month with his family. Christmas of 1945 was spent alone, here, looking for a place for his family to live as he has been doing, without success, ever since then.

If you can help him, the Veterans' Information center (1730-6) will be glad to hear about it. And so will Kirschenheiter.

Wants Free Circulation of Periodicals in Germany.

BERLIN—(INS)—Brig. Gen. Robert A. McClure, information control officer for the American Military Government, demanded today that newspapers, books and periodicals be allowed to circulate freely throughout the four German occupation zones.

The American general, reinforced his invitations by informing the French and Russians that after Sept. 16, U. S. authorities would limit entry into their zone to publications and newsmen sponsored by powers with which agreements are made.

Fears Late Corn Faces Frost Loss

COLUMBUS—(AP)—The weather bureau reported today that slow development of late fields of corn "has aroused some fear of frost injury" particularly in the northern half of Ohio.

"In southern counties corn is well advanced and some have reported grain already denting," the bureau said.

WANTS UNITED NATIONS' DOOR OPEN TO ALL

U. S. Backs Widest Possible Membership, Acceptance of All Applicants.

UNITED NATIONS HEADQUARTERS, Lake Success, N. Y. — (U.P.) — The United States today proposed that the United Nations security council approve the applications of all nations presently applying for membership in the United Nations.

The American proposal was made by Herschel V. Johnson, U. S. delegate, who asked that the council approve the applications of eight nations pending before the UN. He eliminated Siam when that nation in a last minute request asked that its application be withheld until settlement of its dispute with France.

Johnson said that the United States favored the widest possible membership in the UN and that it was proposing that all eight be admitted despite definite reservations felt by this country with regard to the applications of Albania and Outer Mongolia.

8 Nations On List.

The American compromise proposal would admit to UN membership Albania, Afghanistan, Ireland, Transjordania, Portugal, Outer Mongolia, Sweden and Iceland.

Britain has objected to Albania and has reservations regarding Outer Mongolia which also was opposed by China. Russia has indicated objections to Ireland, Transjordania and Portugal.

Johnson said that the goal of the UN should be "universality of membership."

"Those states and peoples left out of UN," he said, "will grow into trouble spots."

He noted that membership applications must be approved by the UN general assembly which is scheduled to meet Sept. 23 and that nations not admitted at that meeting might have to wait another year before coming into the organization.

FIRE SMOTHERS 206 CHICKENS

Smoke Blamed in Death of Poultry at Flenner Barn in Lucas.

Fire caused partial destruction of the barn of Doyle Flenner, at Lucas, last night and smoke caused the suffocation of 206 pullets housed in the structure.

Believed to have started from defective wiring in the roof of the barn, flames spread rapidly in the straw in the mow. The chickens lost were quartered in the upper part of the building.

Volunteer firemen who responded within three minutes after the alarm was turned in, were able to save a part of the poultry and drove a tractor and other farm machinery in the ground floor of the barn to safety. The main floor of the barn was damaged slightly.

Flenner said he carried insurance on the barn but none on its contents. His loss was estimated by Fire Chief Dale Peterson to be around $350.

RESCUE ATTEMPT FAILS

SPRINGFIELD —(AP)— A new York Central system limited killed James E. Brooks, 39, of Cincinnati yesterday after Mrs. Margaret Price, who lived nearby, was unable to drag him from the track where he had fallen.

Offers 'Em For Lofty Purpose

PHILADELPHIA — (INS) — The war assets administration came up today with the latest answer to the housing shortage —surplus pigeon lofts.

The WAA said the lofts, intended for use by combat message birds, have been erected on crowded campuses for GI Bill of Rights students. All the lofts need, said the WAA, are fresh coats of paint and a bit of insulation and you have sleeping quarters for two men.

GET READY FOR $800,000 LAKE PROJECTS BIDS

Officials Report Revised Plans Returned to City By Engineers.

Possibility that Mansfield will be ready by Friday to advertise for bids for the construction of the Clear Fork water reservoir dam loomed today.

Minor changes have been made in the plans for the dam as recommended by the army engineers, the state board of health and water conservancy officials, Mayor Roy W. Vaughn reported.

An attempt is being made now, he said, to arrange a meeting between city officials and the three agencies—possibly for Friday—to put final approval on the plans.

Service-Safety Director William W. Enlow said that once the plans are approved by the three groups the city will be "in a position" to advertise for bids.

* * *

Plans Revised.

The mayor said that the revised plans were brought to Mansfield yesterday by C. C. Walker, of the Jennings-Lawrence company, reservoir project engineers.

The plans were examined by City Engineer W. C. Statler, Councilman Charles N. Shultz, member of council's special water committee, and the service director, Vaughn said.

The $800,000 water reservoir is designed to increase Mansfield's water supply by some three billion gallons a year. Some 350 acres of the 2,100 acres needed for the project are still to be purchased.

Bartenders, Temperance Folk Barred

To stay on the jury in the case of the state against Helen Sawyer in juvenile court today you dared be neither a temperance worker or a bartender.

Prosecution and defense attorneys promptly dismissed persons of those categories in selecting the jury which would hear evidence in the case of Mrs. Sawyer, charged with contributing to the delinquency of a 17-year-old Mansfield boy by selling him beer.

After calling upon all of the 28 veniremen drawn for the case and one additional person, a jury of five women and seven men was sealed shortly before 11 a. m. The state had called three of the six or more witnesses it expects to question in the case by the noon recess.

Presentation of the defense's evidence was not expected until late this afternoon.

Tests 'Ejector Seat' Parachute

DAYTON —(AP)— In the second test this month of the army air forces new "ejector seat," Corp. Harry J. Brickheimer of Athens, Wis., was catapulted yesterday from a P-61 Black Widow night fighter which Capt. J. W. McGuyrt of Canton, O., piloted a mile above Wright field at 230 miles an hour.

Brickheimer's parachute opened three seconds after explosion of a 37 millimeter cartridge hurled him and his seat about 20 feet clear of the tail fin. Explosion of a smaller cartridge then detached the seat, and he floated safely to earth.

GRANTS AID IN BUILDING OF GI HOMES

Governor Delays Action on Measure to Boost Aid For the Aged.

COLUMBUS — (INS) — Governor Lausche signed into law today the bill allocating six million dollars to aid GI housing, and four more of the eight bills passed by the fourth special session of the 96th General assembly which adjourned sine die yesterday.

Still Awaiting Word

Richland county commissioners today were still awaiting word as to the amount to be allocated to the county from the fund. They have as yet mapped no plans for use of the money. County Auditor Norman Wolfe has estimated the county's share will be $60,000.

Measures still to be considered by the governor were the increased aid for the aged, aid to dependent children and aid for the blind.

Lausche did not indicate when he would sign those three measures.

* * *

Sent To Governor.

Bills allocating six million dollars to aid in GI housing and increasing grants to the aged, the blind and dependent children, along with four others of lesser import, were placed on the governor's desk after windup of the special session yesterday.

Less than ten minutes was required for the house and senate sessions which saw the presiding officers—Speaker Jackson Betts (R-Hancock) in the house and Lt. Gov. George D. Nye in the senate —sign the two house and six senate measures and then adjourn sine die to send the session into history.

The half-dozen or so newsmen present actually outnumbered the elected representatives present for the session as only two senators and three house members were present in addition to the presiding officers.

The house adjourned finally at 1:49 p. m., and the senate followed suit five minutes later.

* * *

Money On Application.

The six-milion-dollar GI housing bill gives the money to the county commissioners on application. It is to be distributed on a population basis.

Grants to the aged and blind are to be increased from a maximum of $40 to $50 a month, in addition, $200 is provided for medical expenses in exceptional cases, and residents of county poor houses are eligible for old age pensions.

The other four measures passed last week authorize a study of all taxes in the state and their dis-

HOLDUP FAILS

Robbers Flee After Firing Wild Shot in Bank.

YOUNGSTOWN —(AP)— An unsuccessful attempt to hold up the Cortland bank, near Warren, was made shortly before noon today, and the Warren barracks of the state highway patrol said the holdup men were using a police cruiser stolen last night from the center of Youngstown.

Two armed men entered the bank and lined up a half dozen persons. When one of them moved, one of the gunmen fired a wild shot and the pair fled to the waiting cruiser, which apparently was manned by a third robber.

No one was injured, and there was no loss.

Hint Shakeup In Attlee's Cabinet

LONDON —(INS)— London political circles buzzed today with reports of an imminent shakeup in the cabinet of Prime Minister Clement R. Attlee.

Informed sources said that among those due for a change in status are Sir Stafford Cripps, president of the board of trade; John Wilmot, minister of supply and aircraft production, and First Lord of the Admiralty A. V. Alexander.

Singing Mouse Caught, Now There's A Pigeon That Refuses to Fly Away

By DOROTHY HAINER

Mansfield not only has a singing mouse, it has a pigeon that won't fly!

The mouse has been caught and the pigeon refuses to escape.

It's like this.

Last week Mrs. George Levy, 74 Sycamore street, issued a plea for a trap in which she could capture the singing mouse alive, and Lester Sites of Bellville, came up with just such a contraption.

The trap, a wooden box-like affair about the size of a cigar box, was set with a piece of bread that had been dipped in ham fryings as bait. It was placed near the refrigerator, which was apparently the mouse's favorite spot. The mouse took the bait and the box took the mouse. Still alive, it continues its canary-like singing.

* * *

In captivity, Mrs. Levy reports, the mouse has been singing day and night. Previously it had taken the inopportune nighttime to give its concerts. The creature has larger ears and a longer tail than the ordinary variety of mice. It is grey. When it sings, Mrs. Levy says, it raises its head and assumes a proud position. But then, it should be proud—not every mouse can sing.

* * *

The Levys have been feeding it pieces of ham and bacon, and bread dipped in fryings. The latter is the favorite dish of the mouse. Mrs. Levy would appreciate knowing about any other food the mouse might eat, and

Fall Protection of Your Favorite Trees

NEARLY every home gardener has a favorite tree or trees, a fine old maple or an evergreen or a grouping of them. Fall is the time to inspect them for signs of disease or enemy pests.

There are many leaf-spots or leaf diseases of maple trees. All of them are caused by the attacks of fungi.

One of the leaf diseases of maples most easily detected is that called tar-leaf. The appearance of this disease on a maple leaf is illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph. Tar-leafspot is most frequently found on red silver and cut-leaf maples.

The spots are a light green color at first, then they turn black and become raised like a blister. The following spring the black fungus spots burst open and the spores are carried by the wind to the new foliage which they quickly infest.

Control of tar-leafspot includes raking up the leaves from an infected maple tree in the fall. Such leaves must be burned. Spraying the foliage in early spring with Bordeaux mixture is an added protective mixture.

A bagworm nest on an evergreen branch also is illustrated. The bagworm is a destructive pest which attacks a considerable number of trees, shrubs and evergreens.

It is easily recognized by the characteristic bag-like shelter, illustrated. The bags are two inches long and protected on the outside with bits of leaves and vegetable matter.

The bags contain eggs which remain unhatched over winter. This makes it easy to control the pest by picking and burning these bags when they are discovered in the fall.

Tells Co-op Club Workers Have the 'Flits' Nowadays

Workers seem to have the "flits" nowadays.

Robert Meyers, employment supervisor, Westinghouse Electric corporation, told the Co-operative club last night in a meeting at the Mansfield-Leland hotel: "It seems to be fashionable for a man to have four jobs in six months."

Meyers pointed out that this labor turnover means a sharp increase in expenses to industries which must continually train new men.

The answer, he said is to get employes to feel "opportunity is where we are." To achieve this, he urged job education.

Meyers was introduced by H. Earl Brandenburg, program chairman.

Murder Case Grand Jury List Drawn

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 28, 1946 TELEPHONE 4251-6 PAGE NINE

Jack Lait — On Broadway

MARK HELLINGER'S "The Killer," I see, announces its run at the Winter Garden will be "Continuous—All Night Until Dawn." That is somewhat of an innovation for New York. But it was old and regular stuff in Chicago, decades ago. We had two, sometimes three, in E. Madison St., which never closed.

One, the Alcatraz, also played "live" acts, including Raae Samuels, who went on to vaudevile glory as a headliner. Rae did up to 20 turns (professionally known as "frolics" a night. Across the street was another house, which showed only silent pictures.

Both were largely flop-houses. Admission was a dime and the homeless bums would settle in the chairs for their sleep, plus entertainment before and after, which made it a bargain.

* * *

Covering an amateur night somewhere, I "discovered" Bedelia. She was a middle-aged chambermaid. She sang. Never have I heard anyone who could go so far off key as did Bedelia. Her feminine charms were in tune with her voice. But a scintillating feature came to light the moment Medelia opened up—one of her front teeth was cased in gold.

* * *

Ashton Stevens, Percy Hammond and I, all drama critics then, became impresarios forthwith. We found Bedelia, assured her that what she needed for stardom was a sophisticated downtown audience. Then we arranged with the all-night grind house for Bedelia to appear in special post-midnight concerts. We all wrote about it, kidding it so everyone understood—everyone but Bedelia.

We had a bill-board painted and posted in front of the house, proclaiming—"Bedelia, With the Genuine Solid-Gold Tooth, in Popular and Classic Arias." We rehearsed her with the hack piano-player who sat all night running his hands over the keys, even when sound asleep.

Well, you never saw such a premiere. It brought forth the flower of the city—limousines drew up, evening-dressed nightlifers and socialites flocked into the smelly, gloomy, long, 16-feet-wide joint and sat beside the crummy regulars.. They shrieked, they cheered, they applauded. Bedelia was flushed with triumph, showed her tooth as she bowed again and again.

We kept that up for some nine nights. We were really doing business. Bedelia's share was more than $60 the first week—more than she had ever made in two months, as pay went then. But we had to call it off. Bedelia, spoiled with success, became temperamental. She demanded an orchestra!

Ashton, Percy and I went into a huddle, across the street, in "Jap" Stillson's saloon. We didn't mind if we had to foot a deficit. But there was no room for even a two-piece band. The dive wasn't built along any such lines. We went backstage and explained that to Bedelia. But she dismissed us with hauteur.

"Look at the kind o' trade I'm drawin'," she exclaimed. "Them is people who go for grand op'ra. I can't do myself no justice with no tincan pianner."

We tried to explain the facts of life to her—that we had drummed up all the publicity as a gag, that people came to laugh at her, that she was a comedienne. She looked at us with pity—and ordered us out of her "dressing-room," a battered onl screen behind which was a soap-box on which Bedelia sat.

"The three of yez are crazy," she shouted. "Critics, no less! Yez can't manage me no more. I'm t'rough!"

She got a booking in a cheap saloon, where, on the strength of the space we had given her, she drew a few curiosity-hunters. And then, I suppose, she retired, genuine solid-gold tooth and all. So did we. We went out of the show business. There was only one Bedelia.

Pegler — Fair Enough

NEW YORK—Have you got time to hear something more about our smart Bessarabian friend who does the pamphlets and books for the political action committee of the CIO and calls himself Joseph Gaer, meaning, as he says, "stranger" although his square name in the old country was Eli Fishman?

I was going over a batch of PAC pamphlets bearing his name with a man who specializes in communist propaganda and political filtration and he said, "notice the bug."

The bug is that little blurred mark, and this bug on the PAC propaganda carried the number 412. My friend said, "look up the report of the Dies committee on that."

On Page 1771 of its official report to congress, the committee said "the new union press (union label 412) (is) a dummy corporation for the prompt press."

On Page 1511 the report said: "union label 412 appears on work done by the new union press. The latter is a dummy corporation which uses the presses and other fixtures of the prompt press. Through a bookkeeping transaction in 1939, the prompt press, which had a judgment for $2,000 against the daily worker, official organ of the communist party in the United States, took over the furniture and fixtures of the Daily Worker and then leased them to the Daily Worker (New York Post, Aug. 8, 1939.) The bulk of the literature of the communist party is printed under union label 209 by the Prompt Press. During the period of 1933 to 1935, the New York telephone directory listed the Prompt Press at 50 East Thirteenth street, the address of the communist party and the Daily Worker."

A sample of Joseph Gaer's educational preaching to the American voters is found on Page 13 of pamphlet 10, published by the PAC of the CIO under laber 412.

This pamphlet is entitled "when a worker needs a friend." All the words of the title on the cover is in white against a red field.

On Page 13, Gaer writes that the waiting period before an unemployed worker may receive unemployment benefits should be reduced to one week and that these benefits "should be given for as long as the worker remains unemployed." He also advocates an increase in unemployment payment.

This is not communism according to Soviet Russia's practice. In Russia, Ivan works or he doesn't eat, or he goes to a concentration camp or a firing squad. But the communists in the United States have been promoting unemployment pay even for loafers as a means of frustrating reconversion and high industrial production and breaking the treasury.

They have found many propagandists in left wing politics are willing to go along with them because, no doubt about it, some Americans would be in favor of perpetual pay for perpetual idleness and would support anyone who promised them that.

I told you before but let me repeat briefly that Gaer has been "educating" Americans according to his predilections ever since he first hooked on with the New Deal about 1938. In that year he was "chief field supervisor" of the Federal Writers' Project of the WPA, the most impudent communist front of the whole Roosevelt bureaucracy.

In 1940 and 1941 he was "consultant" for the farm security administration another of those things, although his business never was farming. His boss there was C. B. Baldwin, the "administrator," who later hopped into the No. 2 job at the PAC under Sidney Hillman.

Leaving the FSA, Gaer sidled into the treasury as a propagandist for Henry Morgenthau who was promoting as "educational projects" a lot of economic theories and adventures including the Bretton Woods thing, of which more later.

He is a very clever fellow, Mr. Gaer is, and doubtless the PAC had satisfactory reasons for trading with a print-shop which the Dies committee described as a dummy for another shop which held a mortgage on the worker and shared the address of the communist party.

Gaer is the name, meaning "stranger."

HECKINGEN, Germany—(AP)—Crown Prince Wilhelm, son of former Kaiser Wilhelm II and head of the Hohenzollern family which once owned almost limitless estates, is looking for a farm where he can settle down.

* * *

The Russian land reform in Silesia, Pommerania and Brandenburg has stripped the Hohenzollerns of all their vast farms and properties and left them with only an 80-room castle, a museum piece balanced on the crown of a high hill five miles from here.

* * *

"It is too impractical to live in," the crown prince said, and then smilingly added:

"A young American officer who visited it, as do many American soldiers, offered to take it off my hands for a good price but I told him there wasn't enough money in the world to buy it."

While on the lookout for a farm, possibly in Bavaria, the Crown Prince is living in a rented villa in this French occupied town, within sight of his castle called Burg Hohenzollern. About one hundred years old, it is the third fortified castle built there by the Hohenzollerns.

Prince Wilhelm said he was concerned about the younger generation of Hohenzollerns.

His wife, Hermine, is living with their second son, Prince Louis Ferdinand, his wife, Princess Kira, and their six children at Bad Kissingen. Another son, Hubertus, is living at Budingen. Prince Frederick is in England. The crown prince's first son was killed early in the war.

"You know, the princes should take up some kind of employment," Crown Prince Wilhelm said. "Their position for the present is a difficult one because they all have been brought up as soldiers and haven't learned a profession.

"Hubertus has studied agriculture, however, and he also is looking for a farm to operate."

The crown prince said that Prince Louis Ferdinand, who once worked for Henry Ford and has toured the United States, has thought about trying to go to America to make a new start.

Admitting that the question of finance was a problem now that he had lost his lands, the crown prince said he intended "to fight hard" for a reimbursement on the estates in eastern Germany which are being parcelled out to peasants under the Russian sponsored land reform—a farming policy which he predicted would not work.

"The peasants haven't the capital or the machinery to produce enough to feed the cities as did the old-fashioned, big estates," he said. "From now on the people working the farms will produce only enough for themselves."

ATTENDANCE SOARING HIGH AT OHIO FAIR

Crowds Exceed 200,000 Mark, With Collections Expected to Top Quarter-Million.

COLUMBUS — (AP) — The 92nd and richest Ohio State fair in history passed the 200,000 mark in in attendance today, and admission collections, it was predicted, will exceed a quarter-million dollars before the big show folds Friday.

Manager Bryan P. Sandles said $156,915 had been collected at the halfway mark in the fair yesterday noon, compared with $170,649 for the entire week of the 1941 fair. Officials predicted total collections would better the $250,000 mark.

Rev. W. E Seesholtz, pastor of the Evangelical Congregational church here for the past two years, will preach his last sermon in Mansfield Sunday, preparatory to retiring from the ministry after 44 years of continuous service.

At the close of the western conference of the Evangelical churches in Highland Park, Ill., just concluded, Bishop A. W. Cooper announced that Rev. Gus Simpson from Cottage Grove church in Akron has been assigned to Mansfield. He is scheduled to preach his first sermon here Sept. 8.

Rev. Seesholtz said today that he plans to move to his old home in Canton sometime next week. He will still serve as a substitute pastor.

Beginning his ministry in Johnsville in 1902, he has served in charges throughout the state, and has also served as presiding elder of the western conference of Evangelical Congregational churches, in Pennsylvania and Illinois.

Rev. Seesholtz was ordained elder in the church at Greensburg in 1907 and has since served pastorates in Cleveland, Lancaster, Cedar Hill, Greensburg, Columbus, Canton and Mansfield.

BUCYRUS—An automobile accident has delayed the homeward journey of a Swedish family who are en route from California to New York where they are scheduled to sail Sept. 7 for Sweden.

The accident occurred yesterday when the father, Bertil E. Haag, swerved to avoid collision with Belva Williams, of Bucyrus, at the intersection of West Perry and Route 30N. Neither Mr. or Mrs. Haag, nor the two children, three and six, were seriously injured.

They expect to resume their trip in a day or two as soon as repairs are made to their car.

ASK VOTE

Ashland Jaycees Again Put Airport Before Public.

ASHLAND — Ashlanders will vote for a second time in November on the Ashland airport issue, city council having passed a resolution to submit the question again to the voters who last year turned down the bond issue proposal by only eight votes under the required 65 per cent majority.

Ashland Junior Chamber of Commerce, which sponsored the measure last year, presented a 500-signature petition to council this week asking that the measure be placed before the voters again seeking a bond issue of $75,000 for the airport. Council responded in the affirmative with the resolution to present the matter to the voters again.

The municipal airport program is part of the aviation program of the Ashland Jaycees who won top place in the state and the nation for its aviation program last year.

A list of participating dentists now is being compiled by the Veterans Administration which will pay the bills and the Ohio State Dental society and final details of the new program are being developed, Weidemaier reported.

All veterans should first contact the VA office located in the Wallpark building for authority for treatment before they seek treatment from their dentist.

Mitzi's Still Scrubbing Up

Mitzi has apparently suffered no ill effects from her 24-hour stay in that tile drain—but she's having quite a time getting her face clean. And she's definitely steering clear of the drain, according to her 13-year-old owner, Janet Rein, of 256 West Fifth street.

Yesterday Mitzi, a 20-week-old kitten, was rescued from the drain in the Rein basement by two Mansfield policemen after she had crawled in and couldn't back out.

Helping Mitzi with that hard-to-clean face is "Taffy," the Rein's other cat. Janet says they're both working on it.

23 Pre-School Exams Are Given

Twenty-three city and county pre-school children were examined yesterday at city-county health offices. Dr. W. B. Wild, health commissioner, reported.

Tonsil operations were recommended for three of the children. He said these were the only major defects found in the 17 city and 6 county pre-schoolers. The examinations marked the final pre-school clinic.

TALL POPCORN—

Before the advent of hybrid field corn it was not unusual for farmers to report corn stalks towering to extreme heights, especially was this true where the ground had been heavily tertilized or the corn was shaded part of the day so that nature urged it upward in search of the maximum amount of sunlight. Not so common either then or now is popcorn that measures 12 feet to the tip of its tassels, but that is just the kind of popcorn that Deloine D. Brandt of Jeromesville has growing in his garden this year. Brandt reports 'not just one stalk is that tall but most of it."

The Minute men's steak fry, with each furnishing his own steak, actually took place last night at the Verne Richey cabin near Lucas, but one member of the group was there, steak in hand, on Monday night. It seems that somebody failed to point out to Judge Stuart Cramer that the meeting night of the organization had been changed from Monday to Tuesday night recently. Cramer was unable to attend last night.

Children's Theater Closes Ninth Season Tomorrow Night

Presentation of "Pierre Patelin" tomorrow night at 8:15 in the South park pavilion will conclude the ninth season of the Mansfield Children's Theater.

The French medieval farce has its setting in the 15th century.

Ronald Smith plays the title role and Judy Maxwell is cast as his wife, "Marie." Ronald Roberts is a tailor, Allen Slattery III plays a shepherd, and Jay Herbert is the judge.

The story concerns itself with a lazy, and not too honest lawyer, Pierre Patelin, who attempts to live by his wits.

At the end of the play, Pierre bemoans the fact that there are too few honest people in the world.

Young actors and actresses attending the theater have presented "Pinnochio" and "Little Princess" earlier this season. The cast of "Pierre Patelin" will be kept intact for out-of-town and club dates this fall and winter.

Harold McCuen is directing the comedy with scenes and costumes by Betsy Cave and lights by David Drumm.

Dodgers Whip Cardinals, 7-3; Open Cubs' Series Today

Hal Clawson

Some remarks are still being heard concerning the manner in which Mansfield high's football season football tickets were sold.

This corner has heard them and so has Herb Smith, president of the Tyger club—the city's lone booster organization for all school activities.

Most of the gripes have been leveled at the school officials for the manner in which they sold the pasteboards.

Possibly the means of selling them was not as fast as it could have been. Under the circumstances—which is an inadequate football stadium—Ticket Manager George Sherman was severely handicapped.

He was trying to make purchasing tickets as fair as possible while giving everyone an equal chance.

* * *

They played no favorites when it came to letting go of the ducats. Members of the coaching staff—who in previous years could take out 100 tickets apiece for friends, couldn't touch them this year.

* * *

Some members of the staff, it is reported, had friends stand in line for them, thus putting them in the same position as the fans.

Most people have the belief that sports writers get anything they ask for—but not in this case. Although I didn't stand in line, another person who did bought me five books.

Although the Tyger club had nothing to do with the sale of the tickets, Smith received telephone calls late Monday night receiving all kinds of stories about how tickets were being handled.

One of the coaches, one caller said, had 100 tickets. Someone else contended that they were being sold downtown on Monday.

* * *

In this last case the caller evidently saw boys and girls selling Tyger club membership tickets in the business district.

* * *

These are only a few of the arguments offered by unhappy fans About the only solution to the problem is a stadium where plenty of seats are available.

Enter NCO Net Tournament

GALION—Entries of two Mansfield tennis players—Andy Zoll and Gene Rudolph—were the first received here early this week for the ninth annual North Central Ohio net tournament.

Rudolph won the singles title in 1941.

Players from Marion, Ashland, Shelby and other cities in this area are expected to enter.

To Decide Possum Run Title on Medal Play

Men, Women Qualify Through Labor Day

Possum Run's club championship for both men and women will be decided on straight medal play.

Pro-Manager Walter "Irish" McGee announced today that the first club championship play in four years will be held a week from Sunday.

For the past four years the club has gone without its annual tournament.

McGee also revealed that the tourney will be based on medal play the whole way through. There will be no match play.

Match play tourneys with two or more flights are generally followed by most clubs. It was also the type tourney McGee held for the club members before the war.

There will be qualifying play, however, with all men playing 36 holes and women 18 holes. These scores can be turned in to McGee through Labor day.

Then a week from Sunday the low eight men and the low four women will play 36 and 18 holes, respectively, with the low golfers at the end of the day being crowned club champions for 1946.

* * *

Between 40 and 45 men are expected to take part in the men's qualifying play while only about eight women will attempt to qualify for the feminine finals.

* * *

Ted Etzel and Carl Kushin, both of whom have toured the Possum Run fairways in four-under par 68's, and Grant Hanawalt will be among the strong contenders for the men's title.

However, there will be a number of "dark horses" in the running and anything is liable to happen.

Mrs. J. D. Rosenberg and Mrs. Carolyn Seifert, both of whom shoot in the low 80's, will be the favorites in the women's tourney.

Permanent trophies for both the men's and women's winners will be donated by the Possum Run golf course.

Injuries Slow Down Tyger Grid Squad

by HAL CLAWSON

Coach Paul Snyder has cut down on the heavy work for his Mansfield Tygers and the team will forego a good bit of the rough stuff for the next two days.

A series of injuries has hit the squad the past two days and the letup is a precaution against some more players being added to the hospital list.

End Tom Emerson joined Dave Richards and Tom Nixon on the sidelines yesterday with a dislocated knee.

Tackle Dave Boals and End Jim Sinerson watched practice from the sidelines last night. Boals has been having trouble with his shoulder while Sinerson was ill.

"We'll cut down on our work for the next two days," Snyder stated following last night's hour and a half session. "Many of the players are nursing bumps and bruises and this will give them a chance to get better."

* * *

Tuesday morning's practice was spent on their general offense while last night's time was turned over to passing and pass defense.

* * *

This latter phase of the game will come in for some added attention before many more days pass. The Tygers were weak against teams that took to the air lanes last fall and Snyder and his aides are out to see that there's no repetition of this.

Ollie Cline, Ralph Majors and Kenny Horvath all took a turn at tossing the pigskin last night with Majors catching the eye of the sideline spectators.

His bullet-like tosses hit their mark three straight times.

Several capable throwers will be available but finding some good receivers may cause the coaches some headaches.

KIWANIS CLUB HEARS NEW GALION COACH

GALION—Coach Ed Rannow and Assistant Coach Ed Hixson were presented to the Kiwanis club at its luncheon here yesterday noon. Both are new at Galion high.

The grid mentors expressed their views on the present 1946 squad and told what they expected of the team during the coming season. Rannow explained that his policy is not to build so much for the future but rather for each game.

Barnes Manufacturing just about sewed up the Industrial softball league title last evening with a 4-3 triumph over Gorman-Rupp at Prospect.

Stub Winebrenner set the G-R nine down on five hits while the winners were jumping on Aid Geiger for nine safeties.

Ross and Vogle rapped out two-baggers for the losers while Welker picked up the lone extra-base knock for the Barnes' club.

Only possible way for Barnes to lose the title would be three straight defeats in their remaining postponed games. Barnes is scheduled to meet Humphryes tomorrow night at North Lake and then clash with the G-R nine again Friday night at Johns. A game next week with Harrington Aircrafters is also on the sked.

Only game set for tonight is in the Club league where Legion Post 72 meets Moose at Liberty.

There's Going to Be Many Favorites for Golf Title

Outcome of Richland county's seventh annual golf tournament appears—at this date—to be even more uncertain than ever before.

There are going to be too many top-flight linksmen seeking the title this year.

Tournament officials are reasonably sure that this year's champion will give Westbrook country club a pretty tough lacing.

Back to seek his second straight crown will be Frank Jocha—a darkhorse in last year's event. After being runner up in 1944, Jocha came through with a 36-hole score of 153 to beat out Ed Blonston by two strokes and Vic Salters by four.

* * *

But there are more good golfers back from the service and that has caused the city's three layouts to see an unusual number of low scores during the past two months.

* * *

Probably the hottest swinger at the moment is Al Hager — who three weeks ago set a new course record at Westbrook with a six under par 66.

The 24-year-old star has been turning in sub-par golf on all three of the courses.

Bob Moorhead is also one of the hottest shooters in the county at the moment and his 2 and 1 win over Hager in the semi-finals of the Westbrook club championship tourney last Sunday proves it.

Among the others to be watched in the tourney are Carl Wiseman, Al Malaska, Nick Linster, Salters, Carl and Al Kushin, Ted Etzel and Grant Hanawalt.

Entries for the tournament are coming in fast at the Junior Chamber of Commerce offices. Saturday is the deadline for entering.

Games this season are tentatively scheduled for Sunday nights.

Moorhead Plays Wiseman for Westbrook Title

Bob Moorhead and Carl Wiseman will play Labor Day for the Westbrook country club championship.

Both gained the title match with semi-finals wins last Sunday.

Moorhead, playing his hardest and best golf of the season, turned in a fine 2 and 1 win over Al Hager, the club's warmest clubber, while Wiseman was stopping Vic Salter, 3 and 2.

Monday's 36-hole match will get under way in the morning with 18 holes being played before and after lunch.

Durochermen at Home For Stretch Drive

By JACK HAND, AP Sports Writer

Failure of the St. Louis Cardinals to capture their final home series from Brooklyn has assured National league fans of a dog-eat-dog pennant scrap down to the final wire with the schedule favoring the Dodgers.

When Manager Leo Durocher took his Brooks on their last tour of the west he said he would be satisfied if his club could split even on the road. So far, the relentless Dodgers have won five of nine games, and, although they have lost their 1½ game lead, they still are tied for first place.

Once back at Ebbets field, the Brooklyns will have a tremendous advantage for there they have won 42 and lost 15. While they are playing 20 of their last 32 tilts in friendly territory, the Cardinals must play 18 of their 32 on the road.

Eddie Dyer's Red Birds had a chance to put the crusher on the invaders yesterday as a win would have put them two full games ahead. Instead the Brooks rocked Harry Brecheen, Ted Wilks, Fred Schmidt and Red Barrett for 16 hits and a 7-3 victory. Kirby Higbe was the winner.

Chicago warmed up for a visit from their old Dodger sparring mates by squeezing past New York, 2-1. Bob Chipman, lifted for a pinch hitter, received credit for the victory over Johnny Gee.

Boston furthered its third place ambitions by walloping Pittsburgh, 9-1, as rookie Warren Spahn spun his seventh victory since his discharge from the army.

Detroit finished its season's business at the Yankee stadium by edging out New York, 7-4, in 10 innings, thus slicing the Yanks' second place margin to three games.

Jess Flores earned his fourth straight victory as Philadelphia made it seven wins in its last eight starts, downing Chicago, 5-2. Flores allowed only seven hits in outpitching Lefty Ed Smith.

The St. Louis Browns had to work hard for a 4-2 verdict over Washington although they pounded Sid Hudson for 13 hits and the Senators collected only four off Sam Zoldak.

Philadelphia and Cincinnati in the National and Boston and Cleveland in the American were not scheduled.

George In for Rough Night

"Georgous" George is going to get himself slightly messed up here Thursday night.

Hollywood's gift to the wrestling world will meet Davey Reynolds in the main go on the wrestling show at the Armory arena ring.

Reynolds won't be having a picnic by any means for the "Georgous" one showed local fans several months ago that he can take care of himself when he's inside the ropes.

* * *

Just to make the evening a success, Promoter Earl Myers has signed Ace Abbott, the "Singing Cowboy" in the semi-final bout against Carlos Rodriqez.

* * *

Both bouts are slated for two out of three falls with a one-hour time limit.

If the weather stays warm, the matches will go on under the stars, Myers stated today.

Tigers Practice For Tournament

Mansfield Tigers — one of the six baseball teams entered in the Richland county tournament here Sunday and Labor Day—will practice Thursday and Friday nights at Liberty park.

Other clubs who will play in the first annual tourney are Post 72, Shiloh Lions, Mansfield Grays, Lucas Merchants and Skeeter's Sohio.

Officials in charge of the tournament reported this morning that everything is pointing to a bang-up occasion with the fans out through the county all pulling for their favorite.

OHSAA to Retain Wartime Play For State Cage Tourneys

By JOHN BARRINGTON, INS Sports Writer.

COLUMBUS—The State High School Athletic association revealed today that it will retain the wartime set-up of four-team state basketball tournaments preceded by regionals in each corner of the state.

Commissioner Harold W. Emswiler announced that the 1946-47 class A and B tournaments would return to the state fairgrounds coliseum where they were held annually before the war.

Emswiler also reported that the state cross-country meet would be held at Mansfield Nov. 2.

Action on the tournaments was taken at a meeting of the high school athletic commission at Cedar Point last week-end but not released by Emswiler's office until today.

The troublesome controversy resulting from schools of unequal size competing in the same class cropped up at the meeting with two separate proposals being given the commission by dissatisfied groups.

Emswiler said that several of the smaller class A schools in the northwestern area petitioned for permission to hold a separate district tournament rather than in conjunction with the larger high schools of the Toledo metropolitan area.

* * *

Simultaneously, a group of class B exempted village and parochial schools in the Fremont area suggested that they be allowed two representatives in district play rather than one.

Emswiler explained that these schools hold a separate tournament and are now authorized a single representative to compete with county tourney winners. The request for additional representation was based upon the larger size of the parochial-exempted village group.

No action was taken on either proposal, but Emswiler indicated that the commission was not favorable to recognizing sizing distinctions within the established major classifications.

Emswiler pointed out that a proposal to regroup the state association's 1,160 member schools was defeated when submitted to a referendum last spring.

Other matters Emswiler said were discussed by the commission included:

Reorganization of the present system of allowing representation in the high school basketball tournament;

Banning of practice games and independent baseball participation;

A north central association of colleges and secondary schools ruling against holiday tournaments not sponsored by the state body.

Commenting on the decision to retain the four-team state final in basketball, Emswiler said it was favored for two major reasons.

"It gives fans in each particular section the opportunity to follow their teams without coming all the way to Columbus," the commissioner said. He added:

* * *

"Moreover, it makes it possible to play the entire state tourney in two days with each team playing only one game a day."

* * *

Emswiler pointed out that the former system of bringing 16 teams from each class to the state classic meant extending play over two week-ends or else disrupting school work for several days.

Discussing the present baseball tournament plan, Emswiler explained that only one representative is now allowed for each county. In basketball, representation is allotted according to the number of teams participating in the sport.

"Personally, I would like to see a plan worked out whereby high school baseball continues throughout the summer," Emswiler said. He stated that such programs are now carried out successfully in many states.

Auditors Win State Title

SPRINGFIELD, O.—(AP)—Paul's Lunch softball team of Columbus today protested its loss of the Ohio men's softball tournament championship last night to the Ferguson Auditors of Columbus, charging that the Auditors' eligibility list was not properly signed.

The Auditors won the title before 1,519 fans on Glenn Belcher's three-run homer in the fifth inning of the second game. The score was 5-2. Ralph Solt shut out the Auditors 1-0 in the opener.

Derby Racer Tells Story To Rotarians

Modest, 15-year-old Marvin Kindinger, 1946 Mansfield All-American Soap Box Derby champion, who placed thirteenth in the finals at Akron, skillfully replied to a battery of questions fired at him yesterday during his appearance as guest at the Rotary luncheon meeting at Mansfield-Leland hotel.

The question period followed the introduction, by Charles Nail, of Kindinger and Donald D. Cram, YMCA program director, organizer of the derby in Mansfield who spoke on the phases of its organization.

Detailed questions, as to the length of time, method, and cost of the construction of a soap box racer, and the methods of racing, speeds attained, and skills required by the race driver were all answered by Kindinger. He said, "The skill required is the 60 dollar question."

Red Blood Cells Must Be Kept Up If You Want To Feel Alive
Thousands Now Regaining Old Time Pep, Vigor and Drive By Releasing Vibrant Energy To Every Muscle, Fibre, Cell

Overwork, undue worry, and lack of certain foods often reduces the red-blood strength—and starved, weak, puny blood just hasn't the power to keep up your energy and drive.

Every day—every hour—millions of tiny red-blood-cells must pour forth from the marrow of your bones to replace those that are worn-out. A low blood count may affect you in several ways: no appetite, underweight, no energy, a run-down condition, lack of resistance to infection and disease.

To get real relief you must keep up your blood strength. Medical authorities, by analysis of the blood, have by positive proof shown that SSS Tonic is amazingly effective in building up low blood strength in non-organic nutritional anemia. This is due to the SSS Tonic formula which contains special and potent activating ingredients.

Also, SSS Tonic helps you enjoy the food you eat by increasing the gastric digestive juice when it is non-organically too little or scanty,—thus the stomach will have little cause to get balky with gas, bloat and give off that sour food taste.

Don't wait! Energize your body with rich, red-blood. Start on SSS Tonic now. As vigorous blood surges throughout your whole body, greater freshness and strength should make you eat better, sleep better, feel better, work better, play better, have a healthy color glow in your skin—firm flesh fill out hollow places. GALION SCHOOLS PREPARE FINAL OPENING PLANS

Principals Meet With Supt. Povenmire; Classes Begin Tuesday, 8:45 A. M.

GALION—With the opening of city schools set for next Tuesday, Sept. 3, at 8:45 a. m., principals of the buildings have been meeting this week with Supt. M. A. Povenmire to make final plans.

Home-room assignments for junior high pupils have been placed on the bulletin boards at the east and west ends of the building where pupils will find them Tuesday. Teachers will also have a list of the home-room assignments.

Kindergarten pupils may report to either the east or west buildings. Those who prefer to come in the afternoon are asked to wait until 1 p. m. to report. Tht morning sessions begin at 9 a. m.

All new junior or senior high school pupils who have moved into the community this summer are asked to register by Friday at the principal's office. The offices are open during regular school hours this week.

The book store at the senior high school is open from 11 a. m. until 6 p. m. Wednesday through Saturday, and will be closed on Labor day.

Children are admitted to kindergarten if their birthdate was on or before Dec. 31, 1941, and shall be admitted to the first grade if their birth date was on or before Dec. 31, 1940. Parents of children born outside Crawford county are asked to present a birth certificate to the principal of the school for pupils entering as beginners, Supt. Povenmire said.

There will be a full day of school Tuesday, with the morning sessions to start at 8:45 and close at 11:45 a. m. The afternoon session begins at 1 p. m., with elementary dismissal at 3:45 and high school dismissal at 4 p. m.

"How's This for Size?"

You know it is a good shoe—it bears a familiar and respected brand name. But that alone is not enough. Will it fit you?

So, before you buy, you "try it for size"... you make sure it is exactly what you need.

This same common sense rule applies to investment in securities!

If you are an investor seeking productive employment of your savings, you must choose from many hundreds of security issues, of widely varying types, prices and quality. Nothing could be more certain than that some of these securities will fit your needs... and that others will not.

In making your decisions, you can apply the same simple test you use in buying anything else you need —the test of facts.

This Exchange, the nation's foremost market place for securities, urges you to get the facts before buying or selling any security—whether it is listed on an organized Exchange or not, whether it is newly issued or long "seasoned." Get the facts... and study them in the light of your own financial requirements.

The rule of "try it for size" makes good sense for all investments—in securities or in any other form of property.

FACTS ARE AVAILABLE

Over the years, this Exchange has sought to increase the amount of information available to the investor. One example: when a company lists its securities here, it first agrees to report, regularly, the facts necessary to an informed investment decision. These facts can be had—it is unnecessary, as well as unwise, to rely on tips or rumors when buying and selling securities.

URGE FARMERS TO COMPLETE AAA PRACTICES

County Committeemen Point to Necessity of Completing 1946 Program.

With fall farm operations just around the corner for Richland county farmers, the county Triple-A committee is urging farmers to complete the conservation practices which they signed up for last spring.

Another item which ranks high on the county Triple-A committee's fall calendar is the wheat crop insurance program.

The application deadline for wheat crop insurance has been set for Sept. 14, according to Guy L. Taylor, chairman of the county committee.

Insurance premiums on wheat to be sown this fall have been set at the same figure as last year with a 1.1 bushel premium per acre on 75 per cent insurance and three-tenths of a bushel premium per acre on 60 per cent coverage. Applications should be made at the Triple-A office on North Diamond street.

Taylor, R. K. Landis, and W. E. Eckstein attended a recent meeting at Columbus of county committeemen and state and national Production and Marketing administration officials. They heard discussions of the up and down trend in farm incomes during the past 20 years by Dave Davidson, a California farmer, and head of PMA's field service branch and Harold K. Hill, assistant director of the North central region.

Hill told committeemen that he believes that the national farm program now provides farmers with the machinery to level the ups and downs and give them a stabilized income.

Japanese Dead Still Lie In Manila Year After War's End

By JOHN R. WARD

MANILA — (AP) — The smell of the dead — Japanese dead — still hangs over Manila one year after the empire for which they fought with such fanaticism crashed in defeat.

The dead lie in the rubble of the once-beautiful city and those gaunt ruins symbolize what slow progress the independent Philippines has made back on the long and weary road back from war.

You see the same sad ruins in the larger cities elsewhere in the ravaged islands — Davao, Cebu, Iloilo, Cabanatuan and Baguio.

Bailey bridges which the army engineers threw across the Pasig river when the First cavalry and 37th infantry division stormed the city still carry the burden of Manila traffic. No attempt has been made to replace them.

Manila harbor, in which the hulks of sunken ships may still be seen, is jammed with vessels swinging at anchor waiting to be unloaded at inadequate docks by inadequate dockhands.

The government says it cannot begin reconstruction until the money is advanced by the United States. The senate, however, defeated an attempt last year to get on with the work by floating reconstruction bonds.

Against the background of war's destruction—the streets and alleys heaped with rusting metal and rubble — infested with hordes of rats—Manila is shabby and unhappy.

Almost every adult male, including the president, members of his cabinet, legislators and government officials, wear U. S. Army khaki.

The streets swarm with ragged urchins. Make-shift shops jam downtown Manila, most of them featuring goods which came from or were destined for army post exchanges.

There is guerrilla warfare outside the city, where the armed peasants clash with the government's military police. This unrest outside is reflected inside Manila. The "rice bowl" is out there and rice rationing has returned to the city.

There is a rising crime wave. Thefts and burglaries have been commonplace and now the incidence of shootings, stabbings and holdups is increasing.

That is Manila one year after.

CAR SHORTAGE NEARS CRISIS

Eight Government Agencies Seek to Overcome Threat of Transport Tieup.

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The government marshaled the powers of eight agencies today to deal with a freight car shortage officially termed one of the worst blocks in the road back to a normal peacetime economy.

Reconversion Director John R. Steelman said the struggle to move record crops and mounting factory output had developed "a threatening transporation crisis."

He warned that failure to solve the problem could have "grave consequences" for the reconversion program in the next few months.

The reconversion chief called on the agencies for "prompt and vigorous action" to relieve a situation which finds the railroads carrying more freight than before the war with one-third fewer cars.

Topping Steelman's list of suggested remedies is a proposal that as much freight as possible be diverted to water carriers—both coastal and inland.

In addition to the state and agriculture departments, OPA, CPA and ODT, Steelman also called for aid from the Maritime commission, the War Shipping Administration and the National Housing Agency.

'OUR AFFAIR,' GROWLS HALSEY

High Seas Free, Says 'Bull' in Comment on Movements of U. S. Ships.

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Fleet Admiral William F. ("Bull") Halsey, replying to reporters' questions about current deployment of U. S. warships, today said:

"It's nobody's business where we go. We will go anywhere we please."

The wartime commander of the Third fleet made it clear that he did not mean that American ships could intrude into the coastal waters of any foreign country. He declared, however, that the high seas are "free."

Halsey's comments were made at the break-up of a general news conference.

(The Moscow radio charged Monday that the Mediterranean cruise of an American task force was tied in with the Yugoslav-U. S. situation and that the United States was trying to put pressure on the Balkan nation with a show of naval strength.

(The Communist Daily Worker in London today attacked the Mediterranean cruise as "a blatant example of gangster diplomacy" and said it threatened British as well as Russian interests.)

Asked by reporters if he included the Mediterranean as an area that should be free to our ships without criticism, Halsey said emphatically, "anywhere at all."

A self-styled "traveling salesman" for the U. S., Halsey returned Saturday from a 28,000-mile air trip through Central and South America.

At his first meeting with reporters here since his return, the grizzled veteran of Pacific fighting said he favored more good will cruises of American ships.

tribution; permit the state highway department to take over the Pomeroy-Mason Ohio river bridge when it becomes toll-free in the next two months; ease licensing restrictions for physicians who served in the armed forces, and appropriate $15,665 for a state hospital survey.

Governor Lausche fared exceptionally well in his requests, as only one of his nine proposals was side-tracked by the legislature. That was his suggestion of a study commission to investigate state salary scales. The solons rejected it on the ground that a previous study, completed in 1944, had not been acted upon by the assembly.

OVERCOME BY MONOXIDE GAS

Driver Found in Truck Early Today, Reported on Way to Recovery.

Richard Sowers, 28, Chicago, was overcome by carbon monoxide in the cab of a truck parked in the Motor Cargo company garage on the Ashland road last night but was reported out of danger at the Mansfield Sanitarium hospital today.

Sowers was discovered by Frank Baxter and Fred Dickerson, company mechanics when they entered the garage this morning. He was rushed to the hospital by his brother Ronald Sowers of 575 Cline avenue, at 7:50 a. m.

Workmen said that the truck motor was not running when Sowers was discovered. They said he had been working on the motor and presumably had switched off the motor when he became ill.

Meanwhile Russell Sonnanstine, 34, of Shelby, R. D. 2, was fined $15 and costs and had his operators license suspended for 90 days in Municipal court on an unsafe operation charge today.

The charge against Sonnanstine developed after he crashed into a guard rail at the bottom of Sandy hill on US Route 42 south at 12:30 a. m. today.

He was treated at General hospital for lacerations and bruises of the face, legs and hands.

The court granted his permission to drive to and from his work.

Now about the pigeon . . . It showed up two days ago at the home of Mrs. Jacob Kranz, 1016 Park avenue west.

It is white, speckled and has a purple ring around its neck. It was found by Mrs. Kranz in her yard two days ago. Another pigeon was with it at the time but flew away when Mrs. Kranz approached. This one just walked around the yard. Mrs. Kranz, fearing that a dog or cat might chase it, put the bird in the basement.

Mrs. Kranz reports that the bird has a scar on its head as though it has been hit sometime, but it apparently is not injured now. It carries a band with the stamped numerals 9162 AUS 46 on one leg and a rubber band with the number 46 on the other leg.

Any suggestions about what to do with the pigeon will be appreciated by Mrs. Kranz.

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 28, 1946

It appears that everybody wants peace—even if they have to fight for it.

Long distance telephone calls are said to have more than doubled since the war—and short distance calls are also keeping many party lines busy most of the time.

Before you start on that motor trip—stop and think: Have your brakes been checked lately? Are your tires in good condition? Do front and rear lights work properly? Are you sure the steering mechanism is OK?

Surplus of Meat Now, Famine Later

FARMERS who are rushing livestock to markets to beat the OPA price ceiling deadline are following the prevalent human trait of getting the most money they possibly can out of whatever they have to sell.

Except that it violates the idealism of the Golden Rule, "Do unto others as you would that they should do unto you," they are not properly subject to adverse criticism—they are merely accepting the more modern version, "Do others as they do you."

It is important, of course, that the present flood of immature and underfed livestock to slaughterers will result in a later shortage of good meat—but who's looking ahead that far? Not the government, certainly, whose inept handling of price controls has precipitated this whole mess. Not the livestock raisers who were caught between meat ceilings and non-ceiling feed prices. Not the legitimate processers, and surely not the black marketeers, whose operations not only constitute a national scandal but who also created a widespread health menace.

Nor were many of the consumers themselves looking far enough ahead to materially reduce their demands for meat, so that supply could catch up with demand—at reasonable prices—or to avoid patronage of black markets where meat could be bought by those who submitted to extortionate prices without complaint.

"Eat it while you can," is the advice of spokesmen for the meat industry as they view present glutted markets and foresee a "real famine" by next winter.

Better advice might be to process as much as possible of the present meat surplus so that it will remain in edible condition through the winter, when it will be more badly needed than now.

Angell Refuge Invites Support

LIKE many a humane institution, Angell Refuge did not have an easy time getting started in Mansfield. It is largely due to the devotion of Helen and Florence Workman and a few staunch friends that the city and county now have an unofficial but active system of caring for homeless dogs and other pets.

Those familiar with the work of the Refuge know that the Workman sisters, daughters of the late Attorney Charles H. Workman, have made a practice of responding at all hours to pleas for help for unwanted or injured dogs.

A few others some years ago exerted influence on the county commissioners to obtain the unexpended share of the animal damage claims fund each year.

There have been private contributions to help sustain the cost of operation. Also it has been the custom of the Refuge to board dogs for persons who are going out of the city for a time and cannot take their pets with them. For this service a fee is charged.

It is remarkable that homes have been found for more than 8,000 unwanted dogs in the past nine years and that each home has been checked before the dog is given to its new owner.

Now the Refuge is making a public appeal for funds to build a permanent home that will include a caretakers' apartment, hospital, and pens. There are some who will criticize this building project at a time when many veterans cannot find homes, but the directors of the Refuge say that only non-essential materials such as cinder blocks will be used.

It may be safely assumed that the Public Appeals Review board studied the application of the Refuge very carefully before giving limited approval to the appeal. And those who wish to assist in the campaign can feel that they are doing something for a cause they probably personally endorse, without detracting seriously from human—as distinguished from humane—causes.

So You Want a Hotel Room, You Say!

SOME IDEA of the jam-packed condition of hotels, motor courts, tourist cabins, and all overnight stopping places, is gained by reading today's "Assignment: America" article, by Kenneth L. Dixon, elsewhere on this page.

Mr. and Mrs. Dixon, as you know, have been motoring around over the country for the past several months, and he has been writing interestingly about people, places and happenings.

Today he tells about the difficulties of finding a place to stay overnight—and the same condition seems to exist wherever you might be inclined to go.

In addition to an unexampled wave of tourist travel, removal of the ODT ban on conventions brought on a rash of organization gatherings which sometimes attract many thousands of persons to already overcrowded cities. For example, there were thirty-three conventions of major proportions in Chicago alone, last month—bringing more than 25,000 assorted extra guests to the varied hotels "which were already groaning at the seams," as Dixon puts it.

Nice time to stay at home—if you are so fortunate as to have one.

Scope of 'Amenities' Broadened

IN GREAT BRITAIN the word "amenities" has taken on many meanings. It has been stretched from its usual reference to pleasant situations and social customs to cover practically anything that might add to the comfort of life.

According to Correspondent David M. Nichol, the word can mean anything from beer to central heating, from refrigerators to new housing, from plumbing to a country view.

In short, amenities seem to be what the British wish they had to replace the austerities.

A Detroit pilot has been fined for reckless driving in the air—"buzzing" close to housetops, you know the sort—and an aerial police car will probably be the next thing in order.

People who leave cash in the house and come home to find it stolen learn the hard way that banks are a great invention.

By DEBS MYERS

WASHINGTON — The civilian went before the army doctors, took off his clothes, feeling silly; jigged, stooped, squatted, put some blood in a bottle, became a soldier.

He learned how to sleep in the mud, tie a knot, kill a man.

He learned the ache of loneliness, the ache of exhaustion, the kinship of misery. From the beginning he wanted to go home.

He learned that men make the same queasy noises in the morning, feel the same longings at night; that every man is alike and that each man is different.

Maybe he was white or black or yellow or red, and if he was on the line it didn't make much difference because a soldier on the line was so dirty you couldn't tell his color anyway.

Maybe he huddled at night in a hole dug in jagged coral or clammy sand and prayed: "God, let me get hit tomorrow but not bad, so I can get out of this." Maybe he didn't fight at all. Maybe he built latrines in Mississippi or cranked a mimeograph machine in Manila, taking chicken, knowing that you can't kill the enemy with a shovel or book at more than ten paces; still wanting to go home.

He was often bored; he wasn't always brave; most times he was scared.

Veterans Vary.

Maybe he was young, like 20-year-old Ed Halpin, who landed at Normandy, H-hour, D-day, crawled on his belly up the beach and said: "Dammit, no matter what place the army picks to put soldiers, it always picks a place that looks like Oklahoma." Or maybe he wasn't so young, like Jake Privett, a 37-year-old Pfc, who was killed in the battle of Luxembourg and left wife and five kids back in Blytheville, Ark.

Or maybe he's just a memory in a photo album now, or a dog-tag stuck on a piece of wood near a tiny town whose name you can't pronounce. Or maybe half his face was torn away and he's ashamed to walk down the streets any more because other people are whole and he's not.

Or maybe he came through all right. Maybe no one ever shot at him. Maybe he wonders why he was in the army—what he did. There was John Padgett, a rifleman from the Blue Hills behind Chattanooga who squirted tobacco juice on a bunker of the Siegfried line and said: "Beats hell out of me what I'm doing here except I always did kinda have an itch to pat my behind at thet feller Hitler."

Defeated Fascists.

Maybe he didn't know what Fascism was—maybe he did. The GI did not destroy Fascism. But he helped defeat the Fascists and he took away their guns.

He was part of an army that left its bootprints on three continents, a hundred islands deep in history. With his allies he saved the world, and hoped to God he'd never have to do it again.

He had learned the ache of loneliness, the ache of exhaustion, the kinship of misery. He had learned how to sleep in the mud, tie a knot, kill a man.

And, having learned all this if he got through all right the soldier came home and took off his clothes, feeling silly; jigged, stooped, squatted, put some blood in a bottle, became a civilian.

Demand Respect.

As a former enlisted man on Yank, the army weekly, I have just finished helping edit a book, called "Yank: The G. I. Story of the War," to be published next spring. With the words above I tried in the book to describe the man who went into the army and the man who went out. I don't think he has changed much.

Except he may have learned that a man's color, which didn't mean anything on the line, means something in South Carolina, where a former soldier's eyes were gouged out with a policeman's club because the former soldier was guilty of being born black.

Or maybe after fighting for democracy he thought it should be practiced in his own back yard, and maybe that is why he took things in his own hands in Athens, Tenn.

Maybe he cannot understand why a country which can make unbelievable things like atomic bombs and level whole islands to make airfields cannot level slums or build houses for people who do not have a place to live.

Maybe he listens to the people who say the war is a bore, and they are tired of hearing about it, and maybe he wonders why it is that we should somehow be ashamed that once this country did great things. Maybe he wonders what happened to the great men and the great dreams.

Want Peace.

Probably he gets a cold feeling deep in his belly when he hears statesmen talk about another war. He may feel like the GI who wrote big and black on the walls of the old fortress at Verdun:

"Austin White, Chicago, Ill., 1918.

"Austin White, Chicago, Ill., 1945

"This is the last time I want to write my name here."

Looking Back

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY

Saturday, Aug. 28, 1926.

Two-year-old Dorothy Holton, Sixth avenue, was killed in auto accident on Ashland road, in which five others were injured, including Raymond Hawley, who suffered fracture of both legs.

Peak of reunion season was reached, with many family gatherings in Mansfield parks.

Fire destroyed dairy barn on Joseph Hoffer farm, West Fourth street road.

Mrs. Peter Miller, 84, died at her home, 209 South Franklin avenue.

George Fox, jr., was injured when his tricycle was struck by delivery truck near his home.

Miss Justine Dorian and Harvey H. Sawhill were married by Rev. Fr. R. C. Goebel.

Daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Ernest C. Shafer.

THIS DAY IN HISTORY

On August 28, 1833 slavery was abolished in the British Empire by William IV. The edict, which took effect on August 1 of the following year, liberated about 700,000 slaves. Their owners received compensation.

Dave Boone Says:

A LITTLE of the energy that's going into drives of all kinds at home and abroad might well go into a movement to arouse the public to the suffering going on in hospitals all over the country because of a nurse shortage.

* * *

The neglect of the sick because hospitals can't get anywhere near the number of nurses needed is a story that would shock the nation if it knew the facts. It's a crisis crying for action and the quickest possible action, even if there are to be enough nurses five years from now.

* * *

Hogging of nurses by the army, the general rush for more money, and the fact that nursing schools still insist upon absurdly high requirements before they will even admit a student are partly responsible. Why can't the nursing schools make it easier in a national crisis that is causing untold anguish?

* * *

What gets me is the complacent way the hospitals and doctors take it. They should be the leaders in arousing public sentiment and in getting action.

Want Place to Sleep? Then Stay at Home!

CHICAGO — When they start selling tickets to see you snooze, it's time to say something about the hotel situation.

It's not that the missus and I are sensitive, understand. As a matter of fact, we've had this show on the road six months now, and after that length of time on the lam in this Year of Our Lord 1946 you learn to take your sleep how and where you find it.

But this is positively the first time we ever had to take the boat to Milwaukee, or wherever it was, in order to spend the night in Chicago!

Confusing? Hah! Chum, you don't know the half of it.

To begin with, things are tough all over, as the boys say. Nobody seems to know where they came from or who they are, but all of a sudden this year people began to pop out of the woodwork in hotel lobbies all across the country.

Not only that. It's the same with auto courts, tourist camps and rooming houses. Even the bums are wiring ahead for flop-house reservations this summer, and when the swallows came back to Capistrano they had to get on the waiting list for nesting privileges.

You think that's an exaggeration? Listen, Chum:

In Georgia, we hit every hotel in three towns and finally settled for a room that was being renovated and we had to get out at 8 a. m. to let the painters and the plumbers in.

In Mississippi, we wired a week ahead for a room and then had to wait, heads averted in shame, while the previous tenants of same were pushed protesting, out into the hall.

In Texas, we took one assistant manager out to dinner every evening for a week in order to keep our room . . . in New Mexico, we had to use the governor's influence to spend one night in Santa Fe.

In California, a bit of overseas blackmail about a hotel employe saved us from sleeping in the streets . . . In Oregon, we drove 200 miles one night searching before we found even a lowly auto court without that fiendish "No Vacancy" sign—and high in the hills of Idaho, five bucks a head finally bought two cots and a stall in an ex-cowbarn!

But all that was a breeze compared to Chicago last week-end.

They say things have been bad here for months, but with various conventions—including the Moose and the grocers—and the All-Star football game, things reached the point by Saturday night where reservations less than a week in advance wouldn't even get you inside a lobby, let alone to the desk clerk.

All our friends went to bat for us, but it was just too late. One of them even called up a pal of his who was a house detective, but people were playing it so cagey he couldn't get enough evidence to kick anybody out of a room, which is a strange and embarrassing situation for a house detective in Chicago or any other town.

Which was how we came to catch the boat.

It seems that various large excursion craft which ply the waters of Lake Michigan during the daytime and early evenings do a quick-change routine about 10:30 p. m. and become floating hotels until dawn. As a last resort, a friend who was chummy with the purser persuaded him to let us aboard.

It's quite a deal. You pay five bucks for the room, plus a dollar deposit on the key. (You don't check out; you just walk ashore.) The room is without bath, without a drinking glass, without ashtrays — you're not supposed to smoke anyway — without closets, without hangers and, as we discovered later, without privacy.

There's two bunks and Bud, you've had it, and please don't park your car near the pier!

But after midnight, you cease being particular. We piled our clothes in the corner and settled down to grab three or four hours sleep—only to be awakened about dawn by somebody reminding us not to forget to get out by 8 o'clock.

Dozing again, we suddenly heard sounds of laughter, and looked up to see faces in the porthole!

The excursion crowd was coming aboard and a frowsy-headed blond thought it was just too funny seeing people sleeping, so she was calling her friends one by one to come peep in.

If the missus' arm hadn't been bad, I'd have walked ashore barefooted—but it would have been worth it!

THE automobile industry hopes to produce five million 1947 cars. . . . This hope is the same as the 1946 model hope.

Production is still away below 1941 production but the industry has made one gain. . . . It now has more back seat drivers than at any time in its history.

We Need Other Things More Than Gold.

WASHINGTON — Out in Fort Knox, Kentucky, is some two billion dollars in gold. It is all scientifically marked, tagged, boxed, stacked and whatever else you do to preserve a dull yellow metal stored away in a hole in the ground.

Part of that hoard of gold came from Siberia, from out of the ice-bound earth in the wasteland of an empty country. When the going was toughest for the Bolsheviks in the '20s, they learned that there was always one way they could obtain badly needed goods from capitalist countries. That was to hold out a bar of gold.

They imported American engineers to push the discovery of new ores and to develop to the utmost the scientific mining of gold. That went right on through the war.

It was said in Moscow, half in earnest, half in jest, that there were two sure ways to escape military duty: One was to be a ballet dancer, and the other was to be connected with gold mining as an essential technician.

When the lend-lease pipeline stops flowing, the Russians would like to go on paying us in gold for our goods. They would like to exchange more of the dull yellow metal for the products of our fields and factories—the resources of our earth and our brains. That is the cheapest possible way they can get the goods they want from us.

For the United States to continue to trade goods for gold would be the sheerest folly. At the present moment in our history, it would be the kind of lunacy which is exhibited only by a species about to become extinct. Such a base for trade between the two countries would be enormously advantageous to Russia but it could not conceivably mean any profit to this country.

If we mine our coal, our copper and our iron to make peacetime machines for Russia, we reduce our reserves by just that much more. That is the essence of it. The drain of two world wars has cut so deeply into our resources that we can no longer afford to ship them abroad in return for small quantities of gold.

Dividing Reserves.

We must face the facts of 1946. I have seen figures showing convincingly that, in four major resources—iron, copper, coal and oil—we spent our reserves during the war at a rate six times greater than Russia did. We are perilously close to being a have-not nation.

Russia has resources we need. Manganese is one. Any future commercial treaty between the two countries should provide for the exchange of raw materials from the USSR for machines from the USA. If we follow any other course, we shall be writing our own prescription for decline and fall.

A commercial treaty is necessary. Shortly before congress adjourned, Rep. Jerry Voorhis of California put into the Congressional Record a document prepared by Charles Prince, formerly Russian expert for the United States Chamber of Commerce.

That statement outlines the benefits which would flow from such a treaty — and the treaty would in no way violate the pattern of the United Nations. The document makes clear that such a treaty is essential not only for the USSR but also for Russia's satellite countries in eastern Europe, since Russia controls the economy of those countries.

Unbalanced Trade.

In the first three months of this year, when we were sending to Russia goods valued at $114,976,000, most of it on credit or as a gift from UNRRA, we received from Russia goods valued at $30,734,600.

Of this total, $24,400,000 was in furs; $3,400,000 was in manganese and chrome, and the balance was in drugs such as licorice root and other minor products.

We are a rich country. We can probably afford to go on importing Russian sables that sell at retail for a minimum of $200 a skin. But besides the sables, we need a lot more manganese and chrome.

A sensible commercial treaty would adjust all these matters so trade would mean a genuine profit to both nations. Without such a treaty, Russia will be able to fish to her own advantage in the great pool of American free enterprise.

The Soviets need many things from this country. They have placed orders for machines to complete the great Dnieprostroi dam project. Orders now on the books make it seem certain that the volume of exports from this country to the USSR will mount rapidly in coming months.

Under a reasonable treaty, this might help to stop the cleavage that now so menaces the world.

Secretary Byrnes Has Capable Advisers.

DENVER — It takes a crisis like that provoked by Marshal Tito to make us realize once more how little the processes of democracy can be involved in matters which affect life and death everywhere.

Despite the high intelligence of our people, the excellent ways by which we are informed on world affairs and the vast amount of discussion which goes on everywhere, there comes a moment when we must leave the ultimate decisions to a very few. This can hardly be changed in such a world as ours. And it is futile to believe that public opinion can ever be mobilized in a manner which can give it the final decisive vote in emergencies such as that in Yugoslavia.

That was made clear to this writer when he passed from one city to another on the night of the ultimatum. All was calm. There were no excited crowds, no arguments, no talk for or against the government.

But it is evident that this country is prepared for what may happen, is ready to support its responsible officials and, above all, to shirk none of the burdens which our new world role has thrust upon us.

Some credit for this should go to Secretary Byrnes, who has been wise and calm in words and action. He has also equipped himself much better than most secretaries of state with advisers and helpers.

President Truman is giving Secretary Byrnes more latitude than former presidents, especially Woodrow Wilson and the two Roosevelts, gave their secretaries. In a question such as the demand upon Yugoslavia, we may assume that the president was fully informed and authorized the course taken. But our foreign relations are essentially in the hands of Mr. Byrnes.

Unlike President Wilson, who faced similar problems in Paris, Mr. Byrnes has at hand the appropriate party leaders of the Senate—Connally and Vandenberg. This assures the secretary that he will face no party issue on his course in the future.

And in his official family, Byrnes has two persons who are relatively unknown to the country at large, but who are most important in steering our course through troubled waters. These men are Dean Acheson acting secretary, and Benjamin V. Cohen, counsellor of the state department. They are the ranking men under the secretary. Mr. Acheson is in Washington; Mr. Cohen, in Paris.

In many respects, Messrs. Acheson and Cohen are alike. They have been in Washington since the beginning of the first Roosevelt term. They are both exceptionally able lawyers. They are both diligent and cautious. They know the meaning of words.

Mr. Cohen is an unusually skillful legal draftsman. Mr. Acheson has written many masterful briefs. Neither is a speech-maker or a voluble talker. Mr. Cohen, however, avoids wide personal contacts, while Mr. Acheson is personable and easy in his relations with people.

In their social philosophies, however, they differ widely. Mr. Acheson is essentially conservative. Mr. Cohen, on the other hand, is, in domestic policies, somewhat to the left.

These men are the reliable helpers of a secretary of state who is facing problems without precedent in American diplomacy. Whatever may come, we may be assured that there is competence at the top.

Record of Wagner Act.

In the 11 years before the Wagner Act there were 11,656 work stoppages in big American industries; 5,829,339 workers involved; and 101,378,193 idle man days.

In the 11 years following the Wagner Act there were 37,385 big industry work stoppages: 16,327,305 workers involved; and 175,896,233 idle man days.

Add many thousands to the figures of the later 11-year period, to account for strikes in small shops and business concerns, but add very little to the figures of the prior 11-year period, for very few small shops and business concerns were unionized prior to 1933.

Does it appear that the Wagner Act, which granted dictatorial power to labor unions, has contributed anything to the economic health of the nation? — Detroit News.

Why We Say "On Tick."

A typically modern sounding bit of slang is "on tick" for "on credit." But the phrase is over 300 years old.

"Tick," here, is an abbreviation of "ticket." The allusion is to the custom, centuries ago, of buying on credit through a system of tickets. As a survival of this practice, or at least reminiscent of it, one might point to the issuance, today, by certain department stores, of an identification "plate" or card to "charge" customers, to be shown when purchases are made.

The earliest recorded usage of "on tick" is in 1642.

Amid the Ruins of Devastated Berlin.

BERLIN—Amid these ruins the long black motors, almost insolently rich and powerful, carry the generals and diplomats who rule Germany to their appointed place of meeting.

At the old Berlin high court, an oddly surviving monument of the German empire's taste for brutal pomp, the garden is tended by shabby men and women glad to get an extra meal for a day's work. The gardeners, uncaring, rake gravel with a dispirited motion.

But the Allied sentries, big men chosen to impress each other and the Germans, salute smartly And the generals and diplomats hurry through the tall doors, to struggle over or divide the prostate body of a nation.

Berlin is a harsh summary of the state of Germany one year later—and a grim lesson in the meaning of defeat in the second World war. In outward appearance, as someone has said, it is a city of the moon.

The rubble has been neatly stacked. A year's rains have washed off the stains of battle. The endless streets of ruins, which once composed the bustling center of one of the richest cities in the world, now have a sort of cold, impersonal lifelessness which is beyond description.

Yet behind this dead facade a kind of life goes on. The people of the city shelter themselves wherever they can find four walls and a roof, in pitched up holes and cellars.

They have their rations provided by the military governments. They can live and even work. They work for the Allies, or in the few industries which have been re-established, or in the little miserably furnished shops, squalid nachtlokalen (night-clubs) and povertry-stricken restaurants in which a kind of parody of the normal metropolitan pattern has been obstinately recreated.

The black market men and those who have attached themselves to the Allies have scrambled up above the uniform low level. But for the rest, Berlin is now a large, well-managed soup kitchen.

It is a considerable achievement, amid these ruins, to have organized even a soup kitchen in which the people are sufficiently well fed to attempt to resume normal life. The organizers—the occupiers—live apart, in the suburbs. There, only a little scarred, stand the ugly but luxurious houses of the bankers, industrialists, bureaucrats and party leaders who were once the ruling class of Germany.

The old rulers have been killed, or have moved into the cellar, or have been sent to labor camps to expiate the inexpiable crimes of the Third Reich. The new rulers, with a simple appropriateness, sleep in the vacated salons, and dine at the vacated tables of the men who led Germany to shame and defeat.

It is an unreal existence, given a strong colonial flavor by the sharp contrast between the condition of the alien rulers and the natives who are ruled.

There is something of the Philippines in the American sector, something of Burma in the British, something of Caigon in the French, and in the Russian, something of what—Poland perhaps? Yet all work hard.

This is a crucial moment for the rulers and the ruled alike. In the first year, the mere organization of the soup kitchen which is Germany today required all the available energy of all concerned. Now, however, it is necessary to decide what the Germany of the future is to be like.

The Russians have always known that they wanted Germany to be an extension of the Soviet state. Equally, the British have always wanted a buffer between themselves and the Soviet power, while the French have always desired that the German nation, still almost twice as numerous and potentially three times as productive as their own, should be so weakened that France would forever be stronger than her enemy.

But the Americans have been confused. The United States has no more able public servant than the deputy military governor of Germany, Lieutenant General Lucius C. Clay, who does the real work. But until now Clay has always been bedevilled by the conflict between those Americans who have wished to punish Germany by "pastoralization," and those who have wished to rebuild Germany as a free democracy, fit for free men to live in.

The pastoralizers are fading from the scene. Bernard Bernstein, chosen representative of former Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., arch enemy of German cartels, who once said he could not see why America should not let the Soviets take over Germany, is now a prosperous corporation lawyer in New York. His card of announcement emphasizes his former government connections'

And by an odd coincidence this hater of all business bigness has now applied to secure German motion picture theaters in the American zone for the great anti-monopolistic instrument, the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer corporation.

It is fortunate that the pastoralizers have gone. In dealing with a conquered nation, an obvious choice must be made. If the purpose is to grind the conquered into the earth, that is a feasible policy, but the conquerors must stay there to do it.

Among the Allied officers living their rather comfortable colonial life in Germany today, there are no doubt some who would rather like to imitate the example of William the Conqueror and his Norman barons.

But permament occupation is impossible and therefore a policy of permanent revenge is impracticable. That leaves the other alternative, to attempt to build a working democracy, after individual criminals have received their desserts. That policy also has its necessities.

Democracy feeds, not on hunger, misery and oppression, but on full stomachs, and freedom from fear. And now that the first bad times in Germany are over, and the individual criminals have been culled out for punishment, American policy will be to give the German people the conditions of democracy.

Racialists who are prepared to arraign whole nations in the dock of history, may be distressed. But for those who believe in democracy, and for those who can face the facts of politics, it is a deeply encouraging development.

PILES ARE NEVER "MILD"

DANGER IN NEGLECT

Although they may seem a "mild" ailment, especially when not giving pain or inconvenience, piles are in fact tumor formations without tendency to heal themselves. Instead, they are likely, if neglected, to keep increasing in size, involving more and more of the rectal area.

Even a so-called "mild" case may be expected to undermine one's health, by inviting predisposing to or aggravating other ailments, such as: indigestion, biliousness, stomach trouble, constipation, headaches, pain in the back and down the legs, secondary anemia with its run-down tired feeling and general nervous irritability.

Removal of piles is the only permanent relief — written guarantee. My method produces little or no discomfort, does not require the use of knife or drugs, and seldom is the patient required to lose any time from work or other duties.

THREE BRIDES-ELECT HONORED AT PARTIES

Miss Helen Berges, Miss Virginia Chew and Miss Naomi Velzy Are Entertained With Pre-Nuptial Showers.

MISS HELEN BERGES, who will become the bride of L. I. Malone, Saturday, was entertained by the prospective bridegroom's mother and sisters last night. The kitchen shower and bridge party was given by Mrs. Etta Malone, Mrs. Harry Massa, and Miss Ruth Malone at the Malone residence on South Main street.

During the evening prizes were awarded to Mrs. E. L. Malone and Miss Anna Mae Berges.

Combine Old And New In Bedroom

The home planner's imagination has a wider scope these days! Former taboos are being swept aside, and it is now considered not only permissable but good taste to combine furniture of more than one period in the same room. Practicability is combined with beauty, the traditional and the modern mingle to create an atmosphere of rare charm and comfort.

The mixing of the old and the new is especially effective in bedroom decoration. A headboard bed, for example, attractively slip-covered or upholstered in a fabric matching the drapes and the dressing-table skirt, gives that ultra-modern touch. It has a glamorous air that combines interestingly with drawer chests, desks, dressing tables and chairs of Duncan Phyfe, Sheraton or Louis XV styles. Homemakers who have bedroom suites can replace the beds with headboard type and continue to use the other pieces of the suite if they choose, provided the suite is not too ornate and massive.

Functional bookshelves and cabinets of modern style could be added, too, for greater livability. Furniture should be grouped for convenience and space saving.

In short, informality and liberal ideas are pushing their way to the fore in home decoration as in other phases of modern life. The modern decorator successfully combines two schools of thought with variety and interest resulting. He does it carefully, however, and allows one school to predominate.

Your Figure, Madame

—By Ida Jean Kain

Tell me what you eat and how tall you are and I can come pretty close to guessing your weight. Or tell me what you weigh for your height and I can just about outline your food preferences. Any dietitian could.

Of course, there are exceptions, but the average overweight either has a sweet tooth or a fondness for fats in all forms. Perhaps both. Or he or she consumes stimulating beverages and nourishing snacks between meals.

Your weight is an unerring index. If you weigh too much, either you eat too much, or too many of the wrong foods. At least too many for your particular needs. You may complain bitterly that you don't eat as much as the next person—nowhere near as much. Maybe that's true, maybe not, but it's beside the point. What you require has nothing to do with what someone else may require. Only an excess of food above your needs can make fat. If it isn't extra, it's not stored as fat.

Any food is fattening if it is above your requirements. Of course some foods are much more fattening than others. The food value is measured in terms of calories—those little heat units that add up to bulging hips and a barrel waist. Food fats are the highest in calories. If you like the fat part of the meat, gravy, good French dressing, dried foods, cream, butter, and the whole list of delicious fats, chances are you take on weight fairly easily. That's easy to figure, for fats contain two and a fourth times as many calories as do carbohydrates or proteins. In terms of food, if you trim every speck of fat from your portion of baked or broiled meat or fish, you more than halve the calories. Or you can take twice the size portion of lean for fewer calories than you could with the fat left on.

If you like sweets the calories pile up quickly. Most desserts combine sugar and fat, and often starch in the form of flour. Desserts come high in calories.

At this point you may decide that everything you really like is fattening, so you might just as well eat and be happy. But if you hate being fat you don't get as much fun out of eating as you think you do. It cuts down on a lot of your fun.

If you're willing to meet the situation halfway you can learn to like eating for normal weight. At dinner tonight, trim off the fat. Don't take gravy. Eat a good portion of lean meat or fish, or an omelet, and two or three vegetables. Have a big salad, but use half as much dressing. Pour half the usual amount of cream in your coffee. For dessert, have honeydew melon or cantaloupe. There are so many calories in fats that halving them cuts calories fast. You're losing weight! Do this three times a day for one week and you'll drop a pound.

The 18-Day Diet offers help in planning low calorie menus, and they are good eating. Please enclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

New York Notes

—By Dorothy Kilgallen

Hold That Adjective: A favorite pastime of mine, as you know if you watch this space, is riffing through old movie magazines to see what stars and interviewers were thinking about and talking for publication about when the screen was young. And I gather from mail inspired by these nostalgic pieces that I am just an amateur in the riffing department. Fans far younger than I inform me that they have vast collections of ancient cinema magazines, dusty but prized, and they get far bigger laughs from their pages than from any form of humor currently being published.

Here, for instance, is an illuminating little piece scribbled for "Moving Picture Stories" back in 1922. It was a description of Richard Dix by his sister Josephine, and went this way: "I wish everyone might know Richard as I do, for I know then they would love him. After our morning breakfast, during which Richard and I talk eagerly to each other, he is off to the studio. Mother and I are always there to wave him goodbye. It's a funny little custom we have had for years. After dinner, he and I either read or talk. Sometimes we go into Los Angeles for a movie and then drive home happy and so grateful that things are as they are, dreaming of what the future may hold. Richard just sits there and thinks. No part he portrays is ever as wonderful as he is when—he is just himself!"

* * *

And here is another gem: "What I think of My Sister, Norma." By Constance Talmadge.

"One of the most delightful things about Norma is her childlike simplicity regarding her success. Neither homage nor power nor money could ever change her. She is constantly being invited out by well-known society women and famous professional people, but she prefers her own simple friends. She adores parties where we all sit on the floor around a fireplace in the winter and pop corn or toast marshmallows like a lot of kids, or a beach or lawn party in summertime with picnic luncheon boxes.

"Some days she changes her dress eight or nine times, and experiments three or four times with her make-up. But she never complains. That is the cross she must bear and she is every bit as eager to have things right as is her director. People say of Norma that her innermost thoughts are revealed on the screen. That is because the camera has a power which is nothing short of witchcraft. It photographs one's personality—that elusive something that one has or one hasn't. In Norma's case—and please believe I am wholly sincere—it has revealed her naked soul!"

* * *

And, as if that were not enough, the same issue obligingly furnished its readers with Norma's pearly opinion of Constance.

"Constance is so very human. There are days when she is depressed and others when she is gay. Rage of any kind always strikes her as funny because people's faces grow so distorted when they are out of tune with themselves. There is a wild, primitive something about Constance that makes her want to caper in the woods, climb trees, and let out yells like an Australian bushman. She loves to scream. It gives her a thrill she can't quite explain herself. One time she thought she would cultivate artistic temperament and when something went wrong at the studio, she let out a veritable war whoop. But the directors and cameramen just howled with mirth and said chuckling: 'Our Constance is in excellent spirits today'. So if you should, perchance, be there when Connie screams, you may rest assured all is well."

* * *

Another lulu, this by Joan Jordan, is titled "You Can't Hurry Pola". To wit:

"Ever since Pola Negri turned her eyes upon us beneath the famous powdered wig of Madame Du Barry, we have been hearing about her. And now finally it has happened. She is coming to Hollywood. She sailed from Europe, came into New York where she was greeted most briefly—a smiling, mysterious Pola. Chicago drew hardly a breath of exotic perfume as she swept her skirt through. Pasadena saw her pick a real orange from an orange tree. And now Pola is here in Hollywood. This is what we have found out about her up to the present:

"Pola is not to be hurried. After all, she says very wisely: 'The sun comes up and goes down each day. If you accomplish a great deal of work, good. If you do not, the sun it comes up and goes down even so. Eh?' How very sagely put!

"When Pola does work, she works with an intensity and ardor, an efficiency of motion that lays the rest of the company on the floor in heaps at the end of the day, while Pola is fresh as a daisy.

"She lives quietly and very simply with infinitely greater efficiency and less ostentation than the average star. Her servants include merely her secretary, her personal maid, her cook, her two housemaids, her gardener, her chauffeur and her masseur. Pola is no more aware of their existence tha she is aware of the existence of gasoline and oil in her motor. The rain falls, the sun shines, the flowers grow—but Pola cannot be hurried. Her household, like her inner soul, runs right along—smoothly, frictionless, unnoticed."

BIRTHDAY PARTY.

Linda Joyce Griebling was honored with a party in celebration of her third birthday by her mother, Mrs. W. Robert Griebling and grandmother, Mrs. Flossie Gadfield at their home, Hammond avenue. Washington Letter

WASHINGTON — The capital's weather has a bad reputation—unjustly according to W. P. Day, senior forecasier at the Washington Weather Bureau since 1913. He says he'd rather spend his vacations in Washington than any place else because the weather is so nice. Everyone else seems to try to get away.

There are a lot of other places just as hot, like Independence, Mo., or hotter and more humid like Philadelphia, Baltimore, Richmond, Norfolk, Louisville, Cincinnati and other points on the map, Day says.

The normal average temperature for Washington in July for example, is 76.8 degrees. This July it was 76.2 degrees.

July 1940, through July 1941, were a touch above normal. That's when Washington summers got a bad reputation, day says.

The weather doesn't vary much either. In July 1939, the average temperature was 76.2 degrees, same as this July. Of course the thermometer soared to 98 on July 20 this year, but that was just one day out of the month.

* * *

The worst summer in the capital's history was in 1930. There was a diller of a heat spell that lasted 20 days. On eleven of these days the temperature stood at 100 or more. Once it rose to 106.

Never in 70-odd years had there been a total of 11 days of 100-degree temperature. Only saving thing about it was that the air was very dry, says the weather man. So it was the heat and not the humidity.

Last year we had a wet July with 10 inches of rain. That time it WAS the humidity.

* * *

Just as some men have always been interested in collecting stamps or making bird houses, Dad says he has always been interested in the weather.

He gets a lot of letters. He says most of them are complaints about bad forecasts. All he can add is to try to explain. He guesses he makes about as many mistakes as the average doctor.

"The most difficult weather is when rain or snow is in the offing," he says. "You don't get credit for the easy weather."

In the winter, Mr. Day likes to go to Florida and he "kind of likes to beat the Spring" by going to the Carolinas to see the azaleas and other signs of the season.

Try and Stop Me

—By Bennet Cerf

Eddie Davis recalls that in his tenderfoot days he had an older partner who didn't quite understand what fifty-fifty meant. "In fact," says Davis, "he was so crooked that the wool he pulled over my eyes was 50 per cent cotton."

Appearing at his club one evening with a black eye, Davis offered a novel explanation: "A character with a build like Joe Louis told me I was Number One on his Hit Parade. Then he hit me."

A Hollywood agent came home unexpectedly and found one of his clients maying love to his wife. The agent's denunciations made no particular impression on the romantic client. "Stop sounding like a B picture, Joe," he said. "Let's treat this situation like adults. You love your wife and so do I. Let's play one game of gin rummy—and the winner get her."

The agent considered for a moment and agreed. "Okay," he said slowly, "but what do you say we play for a nickel a point on the side just to make it interesting?"

Bedtime Stories

—By Thornton W. Burgess

I TOLD YOU SO

Give good advice to those who need it
E'en though you doubt that they will heed it.
—Old Mr. Toad.

Chucky and Little Wobblenose were back in Farmer Brown's garden. One was a young Woodchuck and the other a young Rabbit, both but a few days out in the Great World for themselves. While in appearance and in most habits they differed greatly, they were very much alike in some things. Each, knowing almost nothing of the Great World, was sure in his own heart that if he didn't know all there was to know about the Great World he knew enough to be able to take care of himself and, knowing almost nothing at all, was sure that there was little any one could tell him.

Both were sure that this garden was the most wonderful place in all the Great World and that they had a perfect right to help themselves to all they wanted of the good things growing there. Both were scornful of Old Mr. Toad because he was so much smaller than themselves, was so homely and had given them some good advice—to keep away from that garden. How much alike young people are all over the Great World.

"They are looking for trouble and they will find it," muttered Old Mr. Toad as he watched them. "They don't know enough to know how little they do know. It is useless for me to tell them again to go away and stay away if they would keep out of trouble. I wonder why it is that advice that is most greatly needed will almost always go unheeded. It almost always does. They are nice youngsters, those two, but that isn't going to keep them out of trouble. I'll tell them again and waste my breath. Then if anything does happen I'll feel better for having done it." He sighed and hopped out to join them.

"Hello, Mr. Big Mouth," said the young Chuck most impolitely. "Don't tell us we have no business here for we have."

"It will get you in trouble," warned Old Mr. Toad.

"Pooh!" said Chucky.

"Pooh!" said Little Wobblenose.

Then both turned their backs on Old Mr. Toad. The little Chuck started in eating on the row of beans where he had left off the day before, and the little Rabbit started to look for the biggest head of lettuce he could find, taking a few bites from other heads as he went along.

"Hello, Mr. Big Mouth," said the young Chuck most impolitely.

Presently he came to something new. It was sort of a little house beside the lettuce. Never had he seen anything like it. One end was open. Just in front of it lay a couple of slices of carrot. Inside at the back was a whole carrot. There was nothing else. Little Wobblenose was sure of that. He sat up and stared at this queer little house. He went around to the other side and did the same thing. He forgot he was hungry. Just then curiosity was greater than appetite.

Twice he went completely around this little house. Then he sat down in front of the open door and twitched his wobbly little nose. What was that new smell? Where did it come from? He twitched his wobbly little nose some more. Now it was telling him something. It was telling him that this new smell, this good smell, was coming straight from those pieces of carrot on the ground.

Very cautiously he leaned forward until his nose touched one of those pieces. Anything that smelled as good as that must be good to eat. He nibbled the edge. Then he moved close to it and began to eat. It was even better than it smelled. It was his first taste of carrot. It was as good as the lettuce. It was better than the lettuce. What a wonderful place this garden was!

When the first piece was eaten he ate the second piece. The two pieces were just enough to make him want more. That wonderful smell still tickled his wobbly little nose. It came from inside that little house. Could it be from that queer thing in there? He put his nose just inside. That smell was stronger. He put his whole head inside. Nothing happened. Of course not. What could happen? This was just a little house, empty but for that good-smelling thing at the other end. He went wholly in. He reached for that carrot. Bang! A door had dropped behind him. He was a prisoner in a box trap!

"I told you so," muttered Old Mr. Toad, a little way off outside. He said it rather sorrowfully. Of course, the frightened little Rabbit didn't hear him.

The next story: "A Happy Ending."

Barclay On Bridge

IF YOU are going to duck a trick in some side suit, in order to set it up and later bring it in for discards, you must be careful about leaving yourself vulnerable in some other suit. Frequently the duck should be used before you get rid of the dummy's last trump. You thereby retain that trump in dummy as a cop to police the return of some other suit in which the dummy has become blank, while you still have a loser of the suit in the closed hand.

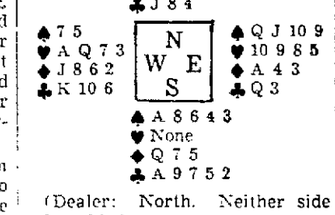
3 ♣	Pass	3 ♥	Pass
4 ♥

Here was a case in which trying for a ten-trick game contract in hearts with only seven trumps proved superior to seeking an 11-trick club contract with eight trumps. The club game would have been hopeless because two losers had to be taken in spades and one in trumps. The heart game was not made by South, but should have been.

West opened the J of his partner's spades. When East won with the K, he decided to limit ruffs by leading a trump. South took that in dummy with the A and then made the mistake of promptly running three more trumps. Now doing his thinking too late, he saw that he much duck a club, scoring the A first, then giving up one to East. He hoped a spade would not be returned, but it was, the defense getting two more tricks in the suit and setting him.

Notice where South slipped. Immediately after winning the heart A on the second trick, and while the 7 was still in dummy, he should have led a club. East, on winning it, could have taken only one more spade trick, as the next would have been ruffed. No matter what East returned after his side's third trick, South could have cleared trumps, then used clubs to discard his spade loser.

Tomorrow's Problem.



(Dealer: North. Neither side vulnerable.)

If South decides to open the bidding on this deal, which black suit should he prefer first? Why?
